

I believe if the state of wisconsin wants to have rules that are more strict than federal rules it should be allowed, it is in all other areas of rules that you see at different agencies. I do not think the banks are out there doing this for the better of the people to "make us aware of better rates" they are out to make money and do not care how or who from.